Highlights

- Differentiable simulator trains agrivoltaic tracker control by back-propagation.
- A neural controller adds 0.007 LER over a tuned window, null at equal retention.
- Conformal margins keep compliance in-ensemble; a learned design network is worse.
- Shade-response uncertainty, not the learner, limits yield-floor compliance.
- Rule-based light sharing allows 2–3× denser trackers at a 90% yield floor.